

Ideologies are like coloured filters through which we see (and make sense of) the world around us. These 'filters' determine the meaning, explanation or significance of everything we see.

Because we have worn these 'filters' from a very young age, we are not aware of their influence, but assume (logically, but erroneously) that everything we see looks yellow (or red, or green, or blue) because it IS yellow (or red, or green, or blue).
